Covid-19 Webinar 3.12.20

COVID-19 and the consequences for sports and leisure activities in the Nordic countries. Which experiences can we bring into the future?

Since early March many of the Nordic countries have been more or less in an extraordinary situation, with lockdown and multisectorial restrictions. The last couple of months, many has experienced a way back to normal regarding the reduction on national and global infection rates. As we now address this issue, the infection rates seem to be rising again and more countries are conducting a more restrictive policy and more national restrictions.

So what seems to be normal these days? How has this pandemic situation affected the way we are physically active? Has social isolation reduced our daily activity levels? Organized sports has had a challenging time regarding contest, training and other arrangements. Can we predict how this will influence our activity behaviour in the future, and how can we use this knowledge in the way we work with this sector in years to come? Registration LINK
